Vanessa January 28, at am Fantastic advice! However, governments often find themselves in a bind when balancing locals' sensitivities and tourist revenue. During your free time don't worry about that too, even if you wake up earlier, you can have a rest, explore the beautiful and huge garden, walk in the village or in the mountain, play to ping pong with others volunteers and admire the impressive dexterity of children practicing kung fu.. Visitors who are respectful and aware of the rules will always be welcome. If I could stay longer, I will do it without hesitations. The teachers, the monks, the press secretary, and the rest of the volunteers all made us feel welcome. A temple dedicated to the event - the Mahaparinirvana temple, stands testimony to the mournful demise. Most of the time I helped in the kitchen with simple tasks and in the last week I was making pancakes and other goodies or was a security guard. I took time to chat with our hotel staff to learn more before heading to any temples but this post would have been much more handy. Take a picture in your mind rather than disturbing those around you. The place was discovered by the group of travellers and adventure in the 14th century. Our coordinator Yang is very good-hearted sometimes too much and interesting person, which became as a friend. The schedule of the things we can do and how the temple is working was more or less as it's write on the profile. Do use your cell phone and camera outside of the buildings on the temple grounds. I guess it all comes down to education so posts like these are needed, thanks! Here I had the best New Year's celebration ever! I would definitely have done some of these things, especially pointing at the Buddha! I really miss it after my week! If you would give at church, you should give at a temple. It was also the first time I eat vegan. You have done a great job putting it altogether. Pausing to think and check before you snap away might result in getting a more composed, interesting photo. I had no idea about some of the customs such as standing lower than the Buddha, not pointing your feet towards monks, and no pointing. It was here under a banyan tree, the Bodhi Tree, Gautama attained supreme knowledge to become Buddha. Always ask before taking photos of people praying. When I was in Malaysia I saw one couple try to ARGUE about getting kicked out of a mosque when they decided to start making out in the middle of the big hall during Friday prayers. These are all tips everyone should adhere to! Evening transfer to hotel. Full of history, intrigue, impressive architecture and carved reliefs, many temples are wonders to explore. Sally E January 30, at pm These are such great tips! A good rule of thumb when planning your day is to remember to always cover up. Medha Verma January 31, at am Thanks for all these tips! It is also known as a Buddha Eyes. Alyson Long January 27, at pm This is something that bugs me so much! Like it or not we must follow the customs of a country we visit without questioning them. In Myanmar, you will get a fine for not removing your shoes, for example. Be mindful of others and keep your conversations to a minimum.
